Transparency Investor Protection

To combat the rise of unauthorized financial advice, SEBI now requires all registered entities (like brokers and research analysts) to prominently display their registration name and number on their social media profiles and at the start of every post. This helps investors instantly distinguish between legitimate experts and unregulated "influencers."

CSR Opportunity: Investing in a Life, Not Just a Device

MMJC

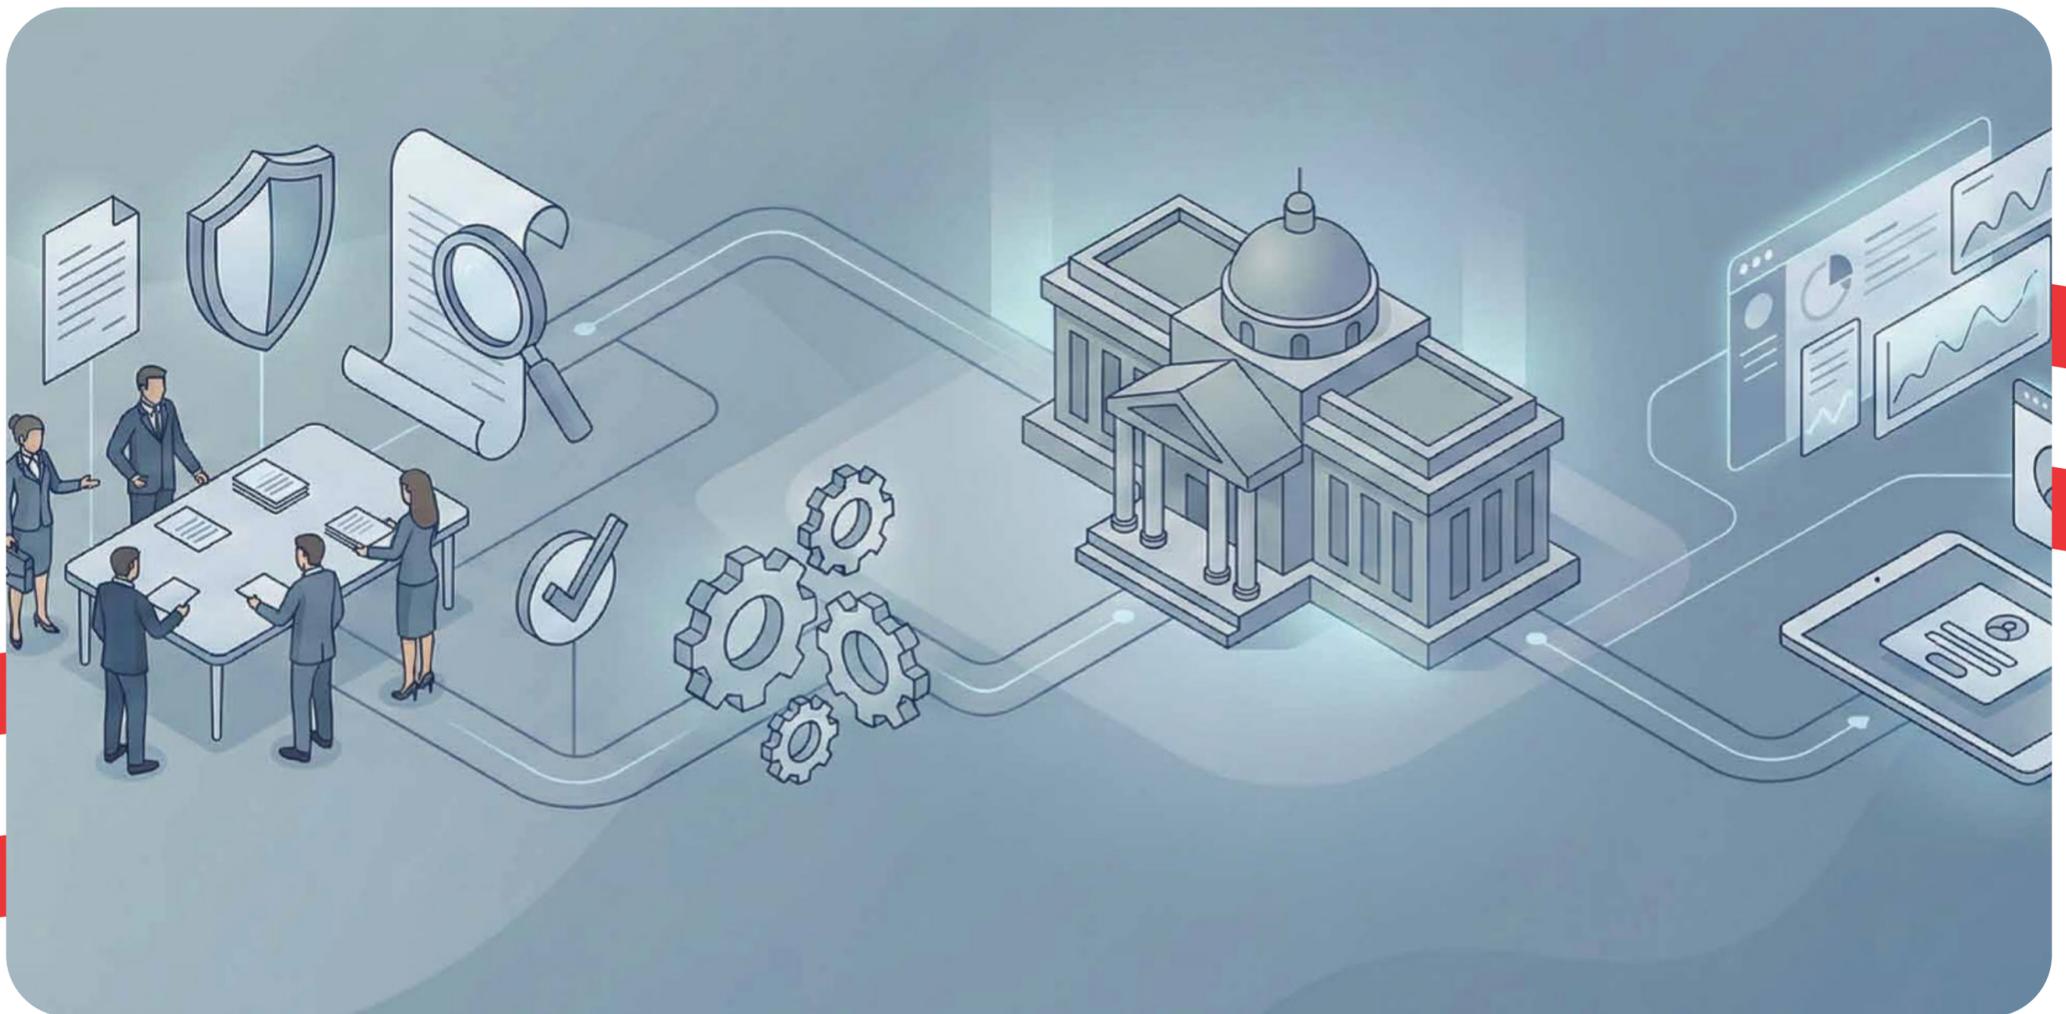

This article argues that Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) for hearing impairment should go beyond just buying a cochlear implant. It emphasizes a "life-cycle" approach, where companies also fund the necessary speech therapy and device maintenance that allow a recipient to actually integrate into society and lead a productive life.

RBI & Proportionate Regulation: Reading Between the Lines

MMJC

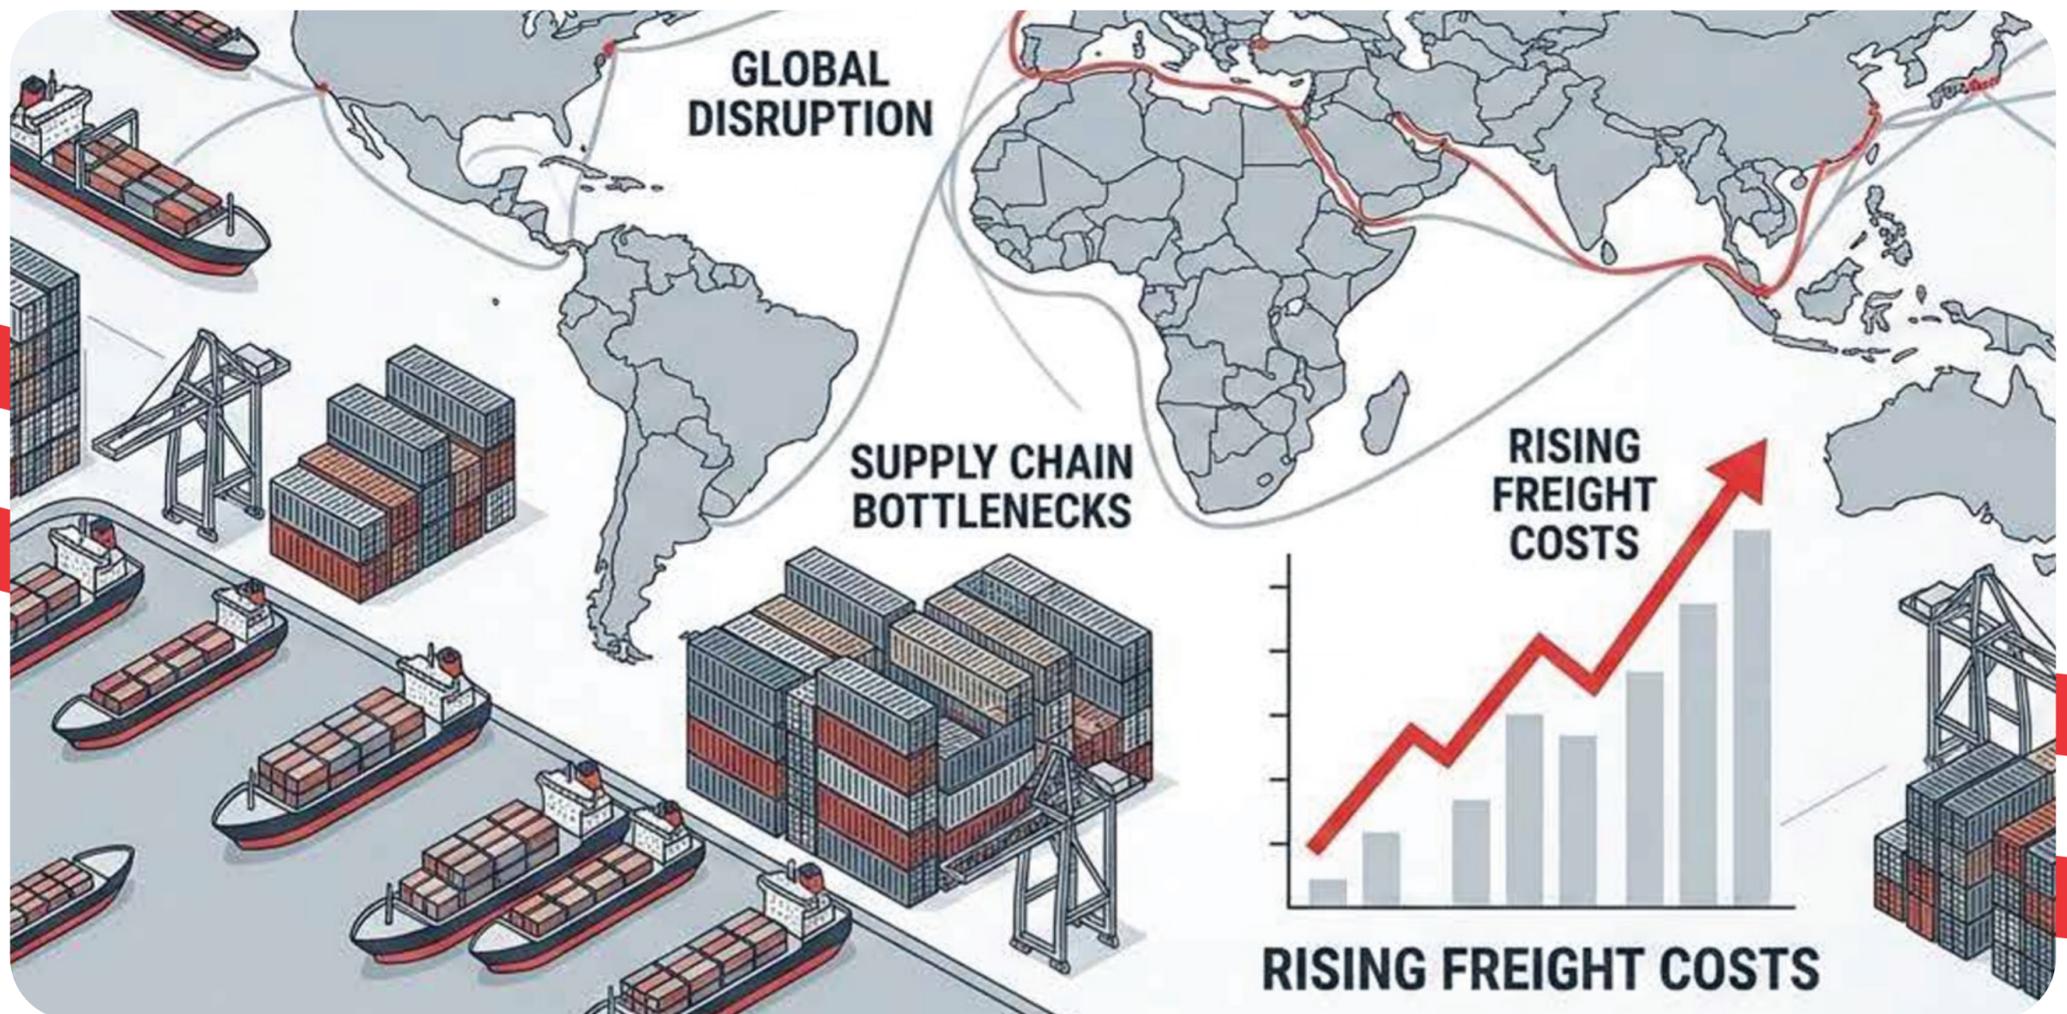

This explores the RBI's Scale-Based Regulation (SBR), which applies stricter, bank-like rules to large, "systemically important" NBFCs while keeping regulations lighter for smaller ones. It's a "risk-based" approach designed to protect the financial system without strangling smaller lenders with excessive red tape.

Global disruptions & DGFT Relief for Exporters

MMJC

In response to international crises (like the Red Sea shipping disruptions), the DGFT has introduced compliance relaxations. This article explains how these measures provide exporters with extensions and "force majeure" protections so they aren't unfairly penalized for delays caused by global events beyond their control.

Cabinet approves major shifts in FDI guidelines for land bordering countries

MMJC

The government has refined the strict "Press Note 3" rules to allow automatic approval for investments where the entity from a land-bordering country holds less than a 10% non-controlling stake. It aims to speed up genuine investments in sectors like electronics and green energy while still keeping a close eye on national security.
